SpawGlass Chairman/CEO Fred Raley to speak at LinCP Forum

San Antonio, TX – SpawGlass Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Fred D. Raley will be a panelist at the Second Annual Leadership in Capital Projects (LinCP) Forum in Austin, TX, on Thursday, February 25, and will share SpawGlass best practices on training. The LinCP Forum promotes excellence in the design, delivery and operation of capital projects through collaborative forums and other initiatives and events.

The LinCP Forum brings together capital project owners, contractors, architects, engineers, program managers, consultants and others for collaborative discussions to improve project leadership and management, project outcomes and the industry as a whole.

“Our people, leadership and professional development are the cornerstones of SpawGlass,” said Raley. “I look forward to participating in this productive industry conversation. The forum is very results oriented and it’s a wonderful opportunity for team leaders of capital projects to view proactively all aspects of such an undertaking.”

Raley will discuss the company’s in-house training initiative, SpawGlass University, its impact on the corporate culture, as well as highlight two of the company’s successful programs including Leadership through Teamwork (LtT) – a week-long training session that focuses on the value of teamwork and creative problem-solving, and an extension of that program LtT Next Generation – a program that targets and cultivates potential future leaders of the company, providing them with further leadership training.

The LinCP Forum will run from Wednesday, February 24, at 7 a.m. through Friday, February 26, at 1 p.m. at Barton Creek Resort and Spa located at 8212 Barton Club Drive.

The forum includes two full days of presentations, case studies, and small group discussions around the topics of Building Information Modeling (BIM), Integrated Project Delivery (IPD), LEAN Practices and Leadership Built to Last.
